Emoji are replaced with PNG images at the current font size:

Border styles

DrawBorder supports five patterns, per-side specs, and any RGB colour.

Solid — uniform 1.5 pt navy

Dashed — 0.75 pt gray

Dotted — 1 pt orange

DashDot — 1 pt green

Custom — dash array [12 4 4 4] 2 pt red

Mixed sides — thick top (navy solid), thin bottom (gray dashed)

Frames — positioned content boxes

Each frame is a positioned rectangular region with its own content area, padding, border and optional background fill.

Frame with background fill and left accent border.
Background is drawn before text so the fill stays behind the content.

Column A

The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog.

Frames allow independent layout regions on the same page, useful for multi-column reports, sidebars, and callout boxes.

Column B

Jeder Frame hat seine eigene Breite, sein Padding und seinen Border.

Le renard brun rapide saute par-dessus le chien paresseux.

De snelle bruine vos springt over de luie hond.

Outer frame (dashed border)

Inner frame (solid orange border, cream background)
Frames can be positioned inside other frames for complex layouts.

Tables — grid-based layout

Tables support colspan, rowspan, per-cell styling, background colours, and automatic page overflow.

Images — DrawImage API

DrawImage renders a JPEG or PNG at any position and size.

Aspect ratio is controlled by the caller; images are scaled to fit the given rectangle.

go-header.jpg — full-width banner (JPEG)

Images can be placed alongside text by choosing x/y/width/height manually.

Here a 90×90 pt gopher PNG sits to the left of this paragraph. The text block starts at $x = \text{marginLeft} + \text{imageWidth} + \text{gutter}$ and uses the remaining content width so the two columns sit neatly side by side.

Any PNG or JPEG file path is accepted; images are embedded in the PDF.
